against it, as the case may be.
After explaining the different parts of the apparatus, the manner of operating it is described as follows: The Acreon being fully inflated and ready for its upward and onward light, the seronant steps to the rear end of the ear, thereby elevating the forward end of the balloon five, ten or twenty feet, as the case may in which its bow is pointed, sliding upon the cavity on its upper surface.

Having attained to as great a hight as he wishes to go, the navigator either shifts his ballast or himself to the forward end of the car, thereby depressing ward end of the car, thereby depressing that end—pulls the valve cord, and immediately begins to descend at the same angle in which he has ascended, but still moving forward in the same direction. In nearing the ground he throws out a small quantity of ballast and again ascends, and so repeats the operation, as Dr. Andrews claims, until his ballast or his gas is exhausted. When he desires to alight, he has only to step to the mid-to alight, he has only to step to the mid-dle or rear of the boat—supposing he is descending at the time—and by thus elevating the bow, either check the mo-mentum of his forward movement, or sail horizontally along until he discovers n favorable place to alight.

Dr. Andrews claims also that his rudder will turn the ship in mid-air with more case than an ordinary vessel is managed in the water. It will be seen that his theory of the management of his vessel is complete. No point has been overlooked or neglected. There are of course many minor circumstances connected with the construction and man-negement of the machine, which we have not space to detail here, and which are not necessary to give the general reader an idea of the general scope of the in-vention. Aeronants and persons interested in artial navigation may, however, derive many interesting, and perhaps valuable suggestions from a personal inspection of the apparatus.

Dr. Andrews claims, and with justice, that he is entitled at least to the indulgence of the public, until he shall have shown either that his plan is entirely practicable, or that the principle is a fallacy. As he has constructed the appa-ratus and conducts the test entirely at his own expense, this certainly seems his own expense, this certainly seems little enough to ask. He proposes, within a few days, to have everything

PUBLIC LEDGER with a motion; by parliamentary fiction the speech is considered delivered, and > envelope and franked to a wondering constituency in his "district." It may be a necessity in the economy of the great parliamentary whale that it come up to the surface and blow off, and then go down again. If it could be entirely restricted to the Saturdays it would be better. One day in six is, after all, not a great deal to devote to parliamen-tary nonsense. Making a speech is con-sidered the destiny of our politicians. The member who should not succeed in going through the operation just deseribed at least once in every session, and franking home many thousand dirtylooking little pamphlets as evidence, would be considered an atter failure—a fraud upon the public. It makes no difference that he has nothing to say. It nakes still less that no one wants to listen to him. At the close of his "entechism" some leader of the House may be kind enough to shake by the hand, and congratulate him on his "speech," but even the most verdant member is not unsophisticated enough to believe that it had any effect on anybody. It is a broad farce and a shallow one. Each Saturday gets rid of haif a dozen of these orators.—The Nation.

Mrs. Moreland, wife of Harry More-tand, an actress, who has been perform-ing at the Olympic Theatre, yesterday evening, at her place of residence, on Girod street, between Philippa and Cirous streets, committed suicide by taking chloroform or laudanum. We could not learn positively the cause which led her thus, with her own hands, to usher soul in the presence of her God; but from the rumors coming from those who knew her, we think there can be no doubt that domestic trouble or jealousy, was at the bottom of it. Her husband, who is an actor at the Academy of Mu-New Jersey, has invented and nearly completed a machine called the "Aereon," or Flying Ship, designed to navigate the air, not merely to rise into and float in it like a balloon, at the sic, had bestowed his affections upon another woman, thus driving his wife to mercy of every current, but to travel through it from place to place, in any desired direction and at any wished for rate of speed, with the winds across it or We should judge from her appearance that she was about eighteen or nineteen years old, and as we gazed upon her fair form, wrapped in the habiliments of the grave, and her pale sad face, and thought of how she came to her death, we could but feel touched. There is always something inexpressibly touching in behold-ing a heautiful woman, with the sunlight of youth yet on her brow, reposing in the arms of death. Vividly did these matchbe, and, the machine being loosened, it immediately moves off in the direction less lines of Byron suggest themselves:

He who hath bent him o'er the dead,
Ere the first day of death is fled,
The first dark day of nothingness.
The last of danger and distress, (infore decay's effecing fingers Have swept the lines where beauty lingers.)
And marked the mild angelic air.
The rapture of repose that's there,
The fixed, yet tender traits that streak
The languer of the placid check;
And—but for that sad shrouded eye
That fires not, wins not, weers not, now,
And but for that sad shrouded eye
That fires not, wins not, weers not, now,
And but for that said, changeless brow
Where cold obstruction's ateathy Appals the gazing mourner's leart.
As if to him it could impact
The doom he dreads, yet dwells upon;
Yes, but for these, and these sione.

A Mason Tortured by the Inquisition.

From Percy's Ancedotes.)

Between the years 1740 and 1750, the Fremasons were subjected to great persecutions in Portugal. A jeweler of the name of Monton was seized and confined in the Inquisition; and a friend of his, John Coustos, a native of Switzerland, was arrested. The fact that these two persons were the leading Freemasons in Lisbon, constituted their crime. Coustos was confined in a lonely dungeon, whose horrors were hightened by the complaints, the dismal cries and hollow greans of several other prisoners in the From Percy's Anecdotes. grouns of several other prisoners in the adjoining cells. He was frequently brought before the inquisitors, who were anxious to extort from him the secrets of Masonry; but refusing to give any in-formation, he was confined in a still deeper and more borrible diageon. Finding threats, entreaties and remon-strances in vain, Coustos was condemned to the tortures of the boly office. was therefore conveyed to the torture room, where ne light appeared but what two candles gave. First they put around his neck an iron collar, which was fastened to the scaffold; and this being Seventh and Chebrer.

An Ecclesiastical Protest Against the

The tilting hoops have at last aroused the indignation of the clergy. Last Sunday one of the Jesuit fathers, connected with the church of St. Francis Xavier, in Sixteenth street, spoke his mind pretty freely on the subject. He admonished the female portion of his congregation that they must give up the abomination altogether, or cease to come to the con-fessional. Nothing half so immodest or immoral has ever been witnessed in New York before. A stranger might be for-given the suspicion that our wives and daughters were all turning courtesans. He did not know what the fashions were at the theatre or the opera, because he did not go to such places; but he could not shut his eyes to such nuisances, as it existed before his eyes, in front of God's holy altar. He was determined to abate it so far as the church of St. Xavier was concerned; other clergymen could do as they liked. As you may infer, this cler-ical blast against the garment in ques-tion has created an immense sensation. A party who manufactures them, in or-der to protect his business, has hired a Protestant preacher to deliver a lecture to-morrow evening in favor of it. He proposes to show that the tilting hoop is conducive to health, comfort and clean conducive to health, comfort and clean liness, and as "cleanliness is next akin to Godliness," he will be prepared to de-monstrate that the allegation as to immorality is all moonshine. So, you see, there are two sides to a question. It's a deli-cate one, at least, and perhaps it is bet-ter that the parsons should deal with it than the newspapers or newspaper correspondents. Our National Debt. Mr. Gladstone, in presenting the English "budget" to the House of Commons on May 3d, made some very important remarks apon the subject of the debt of the United States. He said he considered the debt as something wonderful for the creation of but four years, and that although its amount was less than linance is concerned, is not likely to be attended with any embarrassment. He thought England might take a lesson from America, and endeavor to reduce her own debt. The debts of various Eu-
